THE PRECARIOUS LIFE OF EARLY CAREER RESEARCHERS

Dott. PIETRO BAZZICALUPO

Associazione Dottorandi e Dottori di Ricerca in Italia

Dr. Pietro Bazzicalupo is a former postdoctoral researcher in Earth and marine sciences, currently working at the regional Environmental Protection Agency (ARPA Lombardia). His research and working interest range on Mediterranean paleoenvironmental and marine geological systems, to climate variability and environmental protection. Alongside his research activity, he has actively been involved in ADI for almost a decade. His work tries (with some debatable success) to bridge scientific investigation and research policy engagement, with a commitment to both advancing knowledge in marine geosciences and improving the conditions of the academic community in Italy.

ADI is an independent association that represents doctoral candidates and PhD holders across Italy. It advocates for better research policies, fair career opportunities, adequate funding for doctoral and postdoctoral researchers, and greater recognition of research as a public good. Through local and national activities, ADI seeks to strengthen the Italian research system by bringing the perspectives of early-career researchers into institutional and policy discussions.

The event is open to master's students, PhD students, postdocs, and researchers.
